Louis Fisher is a constitutional law specialist in the Law Library of Congress. From 1970 to March 2006, Fisher worked in the Congressional Research Service, where he was senior specialist in separation of powers. He is the author of “Presidential War Power” (2d ed. 2004), “In the Name of National Security: Unchecked Presidential Power and the Reynolds Case” (2006), “American Constitutional Law” (with David Gray Adler, 7th ed. 2007) and “Constitutional Conflicts between Congress and the President” (5th ed. 2007).

Heather Sawyer is a graduate of Dartmouth College and the University of Chicago Law School. She has taught at Northwestern Law School, Loyola University, and the Georgetown University Law Center. Prior to joining the Federal Legislation Clinic at Georgetown, she was Senior Counsel for Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund at its Midwest office. Currently she is counsel with the Subcommittee on the Constitution of the House Judiciary Committee.

Daniel Huff is a graduate of the University of Toronto and the Columbia Law School, where he was a Harlan Fiske Stone scholar. He was an associate at McKinsey & Co. before coming to the Senate Judiciary Committee as Crime and Oversight Counsel. He is the author of a recent law review article on the confrontation clause in the Nebraska Law Review and handles a variety of national security issues for the Committee’s minority staff.
